

Thinking of Buddhism

Shozo UNO

sa j ta

asa j ta

sa rj q

nx

praj

ru ag u

Ding an sich

Summary

Buddhism preaches as follows: The world is composed of finite beings and an infinite being. Finite beings are expressions or appearances of an infinite being. The former beings are determinate, changing, and temporal. The latter being is indeterminate, unchanging, and eternal. Buddhism aims at awakening to an infinite being. We attain a state of spiritual peace (Nirvana) by this awakening (called Satori in Japanese). Satori brings us a happy life beyond pain.

Buddhism is a path to acquire everlasting happiness.

A Study of Shinran: Evil and Salvation

Shozo Uno

amita

Amitābha

Amitāyus

-

2TJ ET EMC /P <</MCID 105>> BD2 /P <</MCID 109/Lang (en-US)>> BDC